ATTEMPTED BRIBERY WITH GAME.—A correspondent of the London Daily News notices a surjous attempt, on the part of Sir R. J. Buxton, the unsuccessful Tory candidate for Bury St. Edmonds, at the last election, to bribe the electors of that borough. "The other day, a wagon, loaded with hares and pheasants from the preserves of the unsuccessful Tory candidate of last election, paraded the town, attended by the Secretary of the 'Conservative Club.' Hares and pheasants were liberally distributed, to the number of three to four hundred, to the Tory voters."

The persons then present consisted of the Sheriff and his deputies the spiritual advisers of the prisoner, the judges, surgeons, reporters, and a few private citizens. The prisoner walked out, supported by his advisers, preceded by the Sheriff, and followed by the gemainder of the spectators, with uncovered heads. The culprit, wearing the black cap, walked with an unshrinking tread, apparently in a deep reverie. It was an awful moment. ANECDOTE OF SWEDENBORG-PAYING FOR ANROPOTE OF SWEDENBORG—PAYING FOR SPIRITUAL PASSENGERS—The famous Emmuel Swedenborg was visited for the first time with those visions of celestial agents which have been so much talked of, on the day on which he was to set sail from England for his native country. During the voyage, the captain of the ship often observed him arranging chairs upon the quarter-deck, and apparently conversing with some invisible beings. Upon inquiring the reason of his conduct, Swedenborg informed him that some of his celestial friends designed to visit and converse with him. The captain took no further verse with him. The captain took no further rerse with him. The captain took no further notice; but, upon his arrival, charged Swedenborg for the passage of his friends. He was now reduced to the dilemma, either to deny the visits, and contradict his former assertions, or pay the money. He preferred the latter, and the captain was perfectly satisfied.

The Herald uses the same language.
The London Fost believes that at present the question stands thus: Sardinia is about to cede Savoy and Nice by treaty to France—France will then consult the population whether they choose annexation to France or a separate independency. If they select the latter, then Savoy will be constituted an independent State. If the former, the result will be communicated to the Great Powers. In the case of serious disapproval and opposition on the part of European States—which, however, is not anticipated—then France would probably consent to the establishment of Savoy as an independent State.

It is understood that he kneeled, but did not engage in prayer. He was of course under guard throughout the night, that an attempt at suicide might be frustrated. He elept a portion of the night soundly, and woke early. On being asked how he felt, he replied, "As well as usual," but his manner was downcast and sullen.

Between eight and nine o'clock this morning, the Sheriff, with his deputies, entered the jail, wearing their budges of office. Shortly after, the clergymen who have attended the unfortunate man since his conviction, also arrived, and paid a visit to the prisoner in his cell. Soon after twelve, arrangements were made for the execution. The instrument of death had been erected within the walls of the jail, and stood a short distance from the cell. The spiritual advisers of Fee had not left the unfortunate man, and he appeared desirous that they should re-

The address to the Crown, approving the French commercial treaty, was agreed to in the Lords by thirty majority.

The British Government had received a dispatch from France declaring the annexation of Savoy absolutely necessary, but stating that the feelings of the Savoyards will be consulted before decisive measures are taken. Lord John Russell said the views of England would be forthwith embodied in a dispatch was overtaken a few steps from the Mansion House by a couple of men who, grasping each one of his arms, informed him that they were going to the Washington House. Instead of keeping the pavement they forced Stevens gradually down the landing toward the river, until he at last positively refused to go any farther in that direction, and turned to ascend the hill. At this juncture one of the men struck him a violent blow just below the ear, which knocked him down. In his fall, however, he grasped his assailant around the waist, and they both rolled down the landing together. One of the rascals then seized his watch and attempted to jerk it from the chain, but which, being a strong one, resisted his efforts to break it. He then plunged his hand into Stevens' vest, pocket, men at work in a boat near by, rashed to his rescue and dragged him out. There were three men engaged in this highway robbery, all of whom have been arrested. Their names are Rollins, Williams and Roberts.

Lord John Russell said that the case had been referred to the Law officers of the Crown, who were of the opinion that the French Government had not violated the stipulations of the treaty.

Lord John Russell made some explanations in regard to the Chinese expedition. He admitted that it was not desirable to proceed to Pekin, but it would be unwise to say that it should not be done if their terms were refused. An indemnity should be demanded, and if not accepted before the forces arrived it would be insisted upon.

leans Delta says, in a late letter:

A good deal of excitement has lately been created here, in fashionable circles, by the unprecedented "good luck" of three or four Russian Princes, who have made the rounds of the Clubs and a very large haul. One of their adversaries, at the neat little game of lansquenet, was damaged, in a single sitting, to the tune of two hundred and fifty thousand francs; another lost a hundred thousand, another fifty, and so on. At length, it began to be suspected that the strangers practiced a few slight "advantages," and one victim, after losing several thousands at a private room, ventured to observe that he thought the cards "firegular." Hereupon, one of the Russians opened the table-drawer, swept the "papers" inside, locked it, and politely handed the key to the complainant, at the same time calling for fresh cards. This was certainly a clever mode of uniting the suspected cards with
